"Children and adolescents who know more of their family stories show higher well-being on multiple measures, including higher self-esteem, higher academic competence, higher social competence, and fewer behavior problems." - Dr. Robyn Fivush

STUDIES & SOURCES

Several studies have been done that prove children are overall better off with an understanding of their family narrative. One of the most popular studies is "The Stories that Bind Us" originally published in the New York Times.

"OUR STORY"

Juliette and Wesley Eames (CEO of Trace.com) are the founders of FourBears Books. They both are passionately involved in family discovery and innovating in the modern genealogy world. Shortly after the birth of their first son they quickly realized they wanted to emphasize in their home the importance of "their story". Not only how mom and dad met, but why Grandma came to the US from Canada. Why did Great-Grandpa start his own businesses, etc. These simple stories, are woven deeply into the fabric of our families. The struggles and successes that families face can often become their greatest teachers.

Wes and Juliette started FourBears Books with the intention to teach their children the importance of family and preserve the stories that matter most.
